and another one on your back and acknowledge that you're a loser and ask people to have pity and mercy on you once in a while because you're not going to stand up and fight. If one of me,...

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...with the determination that I have, can push for the things that I believe in, if there were just five of you who would make a hard-core group, only five, and if you didn't know what to do I would show you what to do. You give me five senators and I will own this Legislature. Give me five. Five people could have kept Sodom and Gomorrah from going up in smoke, but there were not five then, there are not five here. I'm going to watch this morality play play out, and I'm going to see if the rural beggars and losers are going to learn anything from the past, or if they will convert that Jell-O in their spine into at least, at least, spaghetti.

SENATOR CROSBY: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Vrtiska, on the reconsideration motion. He waives off. Senator Cudaback.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Madam President, members, what's the first thing that happens after a tornado or after a hurricane or whatever goes through a city? The first thing you do is ask for aid. The first thing you do is want help. And to some of these rural schools in some of these districts, that's what went through. A hurricane or a tornado went through. It really did. It raised Cain. So the least we can do is get them off their feet...up on their feet, get them going again. One shot. What's wrong with a one-shot deal? We help out cities; we help out towns; we help out groups with these one-shot deals. Get them on their feet. What's going to happen? It's inevitable. We all know what's going to happen down the road, five, ten years. Let's get them back on their feet here. Let them reorganize. Let them get their thoughts together. I'll tell you what: they're going to come to the right conclusion. It's happened in my district twice this year. They get their boards together; they get their thoughts gathered; they pick themselves up and they start all over again and let's give them one more shot here. And I do thank Senator Crosby for giving this and I
